One may, however, marry a mongrel for the sake of his millions, and Lady Belvoir had regionsly thought of doing so. "Shall I, or shall a not?" the was thinking. "Really I don't believe I can. At any rate, not yet; he is too ridiculons. If the worst comes to the worst he can always be sent for."

But while she was thus mentally disposing of him her attention was suddenly arrested by some phrase of which he made use and which had an odd sort of sound. What in the world was the man saying? "Business matters which have been too long neglected—absolutely necessary for me to look into my affairs and find out how I stand-doubtful whether I shall be able to see anything of my friends for some months to come, These were confused and equivocal statements, nor was the manner of their enunciation such is to inspire confidence. in the macerity of the speaker. "As I hve," thought Lady Belvois, in after stupefaction, "the fellow is trying to back out of it!"

Never in all her experience had such a thing as this occurred to her before, and she rould hardly believe her ears. Instantly she forgot all about Perry Thorold and Lord Couse, all about her premniary enducrossment and the results to which they might lead, and disvoted her whole intelligence to the study of this new and most extraordinary phenome oci. A mean lad lionaire showing anxiety to lack himself clear of Sybil, Lady Belyon! This required looking into a great deal more than Mr. Schnender's affairs could possibly do.

The position of the linckless Schneider was, as every one must see, awkward and difficult in a degree far surpassing that of Percy Therold Percy, in deciding to absent himself for six months. had in fact adopted the only admissible course; when one is forhidden to speak to the woman whom one loves there is absolutely nothing for it but to fly the country. But from this course Schneider. was debarred by various considerations, not the least important of which was his umbition to enter parliament.

Only perhaps it would be wiser-more straightforward, that is-to avoid the society of ladies for the next six months. Lady Belvoir, would you think it very odd if I asked you to take no notice of no-to behave as if you didn't know me, in fact-for the present?"

Schneider, as he put forward this remarkable demand, grew very red in the face; for he could not but be aware of the insuffleiency of the reasons which he had addreed in support of it. He was therefore greatly relieved to hear that Lady Belvoir would not think it oddnot in the least odd.

"When is it that I am to be allowed to speak to you again?" she asked. "Didyou say six months hence?"

"Yes; in January next I hope to be released from my-er-voluntary extle." "Ah! Aml do you really imagine, Mr. Schneider, that I believe one single word of what you have been telling me?"

The unhappy Schneider hung his head, and remained silent. Of course she didn't believe him; yet, since he could not reveid the truth, what was he to say?

She enjoyed his discomfiture for a few seconds before she resumed:

"Lord Guise is the clever by half, and yon, my dear Mr. Schneider, are not quite clever enough. How did he contrive to extert that promise from you and Mr. Thorold?"

"Oh," exclaimed Schneider, with just indignation, "if Thorold has been butraying us"-

"But he hasn't; you betrayed yourself. It was that specified period of six months that enlightened me, and my mentioning Lord Unise was only a shot-which, I see, was a good one. And now, as I know so much, you may us well fell me ull."

"Don't ask me," pleaded Schneider piteonsly; "I have let out a great deal more than I ought to have done. I am bound by a pledge which I rashly took long before I - But really I have no business to be saying this."

Lady Belvolr kept her countenance admirably, though 1 er suppressed merriment was great.

"It is difficult to believe that you can be in love with a woman whom you so thoroughly distrist," she observed; "her memory may not be so short as you suppose. But of course I can give you no advice if you decline to take me into your confidence. I may be wronging you; yet it does sound to me very mach as though you wanted to avoid proposlug to her. You say you are as innocent as a baby-which may or may not be the case, but it doesn't exactly accord with the reputation that you bear-nevertheless, you mustn't open your lips for another six months. Why six months rather than three months or a year? All this is very inexplicable to me.

"I knew it would be," sighed Moretun; "but I can't help it. I would give all I possess-that isn't much, to be sure -to be able to speak more openly to you; but the thing can't be done. In all my life I have only loved one wom-"Oh!" interjected Lady Belyoir. "Yes, you may laugh, but it's true, all the same. Only one woman; the others were mere passing fancies. Well, I hope she knows it, though she can't hear it from me."

"Not even when the six months are up? But perhaps that will be a long enough delny to cure you. I remember, continued Lady Belvoir urtlessly, "Lord Guise once saying to me that if a man could be kept for six months from proposing he would never propose at all. That would be a most desirable state of things from his point of view." "I know it would-confound him!"

grawled Moreton. "But why confound him? It isn't he who prohibits you from speaking. I suppose? You would hardly obey him if he did. Well, since you are so very nucomimmicative, I'm afraid there isn't much that I can do for you, and of course, not knowing the woman's name, I can't judge of what your chances might bewith her. Still, if silent sympathy is any comfort to you, you can come to une for it as often as you want it."

Moreton responded by a gently reproachful look. He knew that Lady Belvolr was as well acquainted with the name of the unnamed one as he was, And had he not just stated that he must be severed from her for six months by n cruel fate? However, he felt that he could not conscientionally go may farther States Canada and Mexico. than he had already gone, so he said:

"You are awfully kind; but I shan't be nlile to come to you for sympathy if I'm in Australia, you see."

"You will return from Australia, and on your arrival you will find me as sympathetic as ever. By the way, do you hold especially to Australia? If not you might offer yourself as a traveling companion to Mr. Thorold, who is about to start for Japan and California."

"Oh, Thorold is going to Japan, is he?" said Moreton, and then he glanced half questioningly at his informant, who preserved an impassive demeanor.

Well, it really would not do to hesitate and hint any longer. Fearing lest he should be led to betray what he had no right to betray, Moreton got up bastily and made his adienx. He did not say that he would be back in England by the beginning of the next year, but he allowed it to be inferred that that was probable, and he ventured to express a hope that he would not be entirely forgotten during his absence. Lady Belvoir replied demurely that she never forgot her friends, and when she took his hand she gave it a very slight pressure, which he thought himself justified in re-

THE GENUINE UMBRELLA SKIRT FOR THE PROMENADE.

It Comes from Paris, but Our Dressmakers Are Adopting It Hapidly-Ruffles and Flounces Will Prevail on Spring Gowns. and They Are Graceful Too.

The most striking midwinter novelty the head of President Elect Cleveland at in skirts to be worn on the promenade is the chamber of commerce banquet. other trimming at the gores to prevent the inevitable sagging at the seams that must otherwise occur. All skirts are cut with as pronounced a flare at the bottom as it is possible to give them. They are trimmed up considerably higher than they were at the beginning of the season, the trimming reaching to the knees or above. As many as seven rows of fur, separated by spaces, are seen on some of the new skirts.

Bands of fancy galloon, ribbons and folds of black satin will be used in rows in the same way as fur on spring gowns. Small bows are dotted on at intervals sometimes. Where the material permits, ruffles of the dress goods may be used. A new ruffle which reaches to the knees, like the old fashioned Spanish flounce, is cut in a circular fashion, somewhat after the manner of a bell skirt. This ruffle is quite full around the bottom and scant at the top, giving the fashionable flare of the season. It is usually put on with a heading of two or three narrow ruffles standing upright. or with a band of fur.

A group of from three to five narrow ruffles overlapping each other is also used on the bottom of light goods, such as the black or cream ganze with gay satin stripes. Let it be acknowledged here that these full skirts are lovely. They are becoming and graceful to the Virginia Eggnog.

To make one gallen of eggnog take one dozen eggs; separate the whites and the yolks very carefully. Beat each until it becomes as light as practicable. Add one pound of pulverized white sugar to the yolks and mix thoroughly. Then add one quart of cognac brandy and a half pint of Jamaica rum, ponring them in a small stream while stirring actively. Add half a gallon of rich milk. Then add not less than threefourths of the bulk of the whites and incorporate thoroughly. The remainder of the whites should be put upon the surface merely as an ornament. A large portion of the white of the eggs should always be mixed with the compound to render it light and wholesome.

But he is very domesticated, and this in the district where he resides is held to atone for his multitude of sins. Recently he made a bargain with his wife to dust three of her carpets on cleaning up day, the agreement being that she should relieve him of the rest. This arrangement was faithfully observed by both parties, and for three Mondays in succession John went to his office with a satisfied conscience. I met Rev. Walnow Tharp at Mr. A. W. Carpenter's lass fell and he said that he wanted a good seg. I told kim that I had one and described the dog to him. He offered nea shot gan valued at $35, provided he liked how I then sent the alog to han at Carline and received this

WALLACE THARP. Carlisle, Ky., Oct. 25, 1892."

I did not hear from Mr. Tharp for 8 or 10 days. In the meantime I had several persons to ask me what had become of the dag, and I told them I larl sold him for $35, expecting to get the gnn. I then got a letter saying that the dog had been in a fight andigot his leg bitten and it was swo'l n as large as a man's arm. Mr. Tharp then said that he could a pistoi, worth $12.50, and a box of cart-traits before it is too late. We have three letters from Mr. Tharp in our possession, which substantiate great crowds whenever he appeared in the above and show that his original proposition was to give Mr. Wharton the gun for the dog, but declined to stand to it after the dog got hurt in a fight while in his possession. He then made the pistol-cartridge-$5-offer, which Mr. Wharton accepted rather than pay express charges both ways on the dog. We are not disposed to pursue the matter further, but when Mr. Tharp, or any other man, harls the "infamous liar" at any one who gives us an item, we shall always give the accused it chance to defend himself.

Hawk, with three in the 2:30 list, was the champion trotting sire of the world. One hundred and twenty-five dollars been sold for $1,000. A bill was passed in the Ohio legislature recently making it a penitentiary offense to enter a horse in a class to which he is not eligible.

E. D. Wiggin will trot Martha Wilkes to old style sulky at Cleveland against the record of Mand S. Mr. Bonner agrees that if she trots in 2:05 he will present Mr. Wiggin with $5,000. Stamboul may not hold the stallion crown, but he is a game race horse. In his 3-year-old form be tretted a 6-heat race against Apex, and so determined was the contest that they trotted two dead heats before either would succumb. But one tratter and one pacer has taken a record as low as 2:01; four trotters have gone in 2:08 as against 10 pacers that have done the same; 13 trotters have entered the 2:19 list, while 19 pacers offset the honors. In the 2:12 list are 34 trotters and 47 pacers, and within the 2:15 limit are 121 trotters and 141 pavers.

THE LATEST NOVELTIES.

Jewelry set with colored pearls is becoming popular.

A pincushion is inserted in the hollow of a silver thimble.

Around a chatclaine eveglass case a flowering vine in silver is twined. The mistletoe bough is imitated in a wreath of emeralds, to which clings a golden vine set with pearls. A dainty chatelaine scroll of sky blue enamel bears a golden griffin. Through the scroll passes a pearl headed pin.

Up the side of a gold lined silver bowl climbs a vine of the same metal, a delicate tea rose lying upon the ontward curving edge.

A new brooch is in the form of a broad golden collar, like that of un order of knighthood, pierced through the back and both ends by a pearl hilted rapier.

A snufish forms the bowl of a novel marine spoon, the stem being a piece of driftwood with a rope artistically coiled about it and an oyster shell clinging near the top.

A photograph frame of white onyx is decorated with orchids of the same material shaded in tints of orange, yellow and white. The dark green leaves are imitated in jade.—Jewelers' Weekly.

THE CONQUERED BANNER.

Furl that banner, for 'tir weary, Round Its staff 'tis drooping dreary;

Furl it, lold it-It la hest; For there's not a man to wave it, And there's not a sword to save it, And there's not one left to live it In the blood which herevs gave it, And its files now acorn and brave it Firel it, hide it, let it rist.

Take the bantier down, 'tis tattered, Broken is its staff, and abattered, And the vallant hosts are scattered, Over whom It floated high. Oh! 'tis hard for us to fold it, Hard to think there's none to hold it; Hard that those who once enrolled to Now must furl it with a sigh

Furl that banner, furl it sadly: Once ten thousand hailed it gladly. And ten thousand wlidly, madly Swore it should forever wave; Swore a loeman's sword could never-Hearts like theirs eniwined dissever,

'Till that flag would float forever

Furlit, for the hands that grasped II, And the hands that foully clasped 1. Cold and dead are iying tov ; And the banner it is trailing, While around it sounds the walling

O'er their freedom or their grave

Of its people in their woe. For the conquered they adore it, Love the cold, dead hands that hare it, l'ardon those who trailed and tore it, And, oh' wildly they deplore it, Now to furl and find it so,

Furl that banuer, true 'tic gory, Yet 'me wreathed around with glory. And 'twill live in song and story, Though its f lds are in the dust;

For its fame, on brightest pages, Penned by port and by sages. Shall go sound ng down the ages, Furl its folds though now we must had that lancer, saltly, slowly,

Treat it gently-it is holy-For it droops alove the de d, Touch it not, unt. ld it never. Let it droop there, fieled f inver, For its people's hopes are dead
